DETAILED ACTION

Status

1. All previous grounds of rejection have been withdrawn in view of the amendments to the claims requiring the use of a "high porosity foam meshed based material" for at least some of the supplemental electrodes.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

3. Claims 59-73 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. Applicant has failed to provide clear or convincing evidence that the current language of "high porosity foam meshed based material" is supported by the specification as filed. In fact, the disclosure of "metallic wire mesh" within the specification as filed clearly does not support "high porosity foam meshed based material" because "wire mesh" has a clear, art recognized definition, which is not "high porosity foam meshed based material".

Response to Amendment

4. The declaration under 37 CFR 1.132 filed 8 September 2006 is insufficient to overcome the rejection of claims based upon 35 USC 112, 1st paragraph as set forth above because: Applicant's statement that "meshed" used in the patent specification was Applicant's own interpretation of what "high porosity foam like lattice" may mean generically is not found persuasive. Firstly, the term "meshed" does not appear in the specification as filed, only "mesh". Second, one of ordinary skill in the art would not have been able to determine that "metallic wire mesh" (specification as filed, page 6, lines 5-7) meant the Incofoam™ that Applicant is now trying to claim. An internet search on Google™ for "wire mesh" returns numerous results for typical wire mesh that is made by weaving wires in a manner similar to weaving of fabrics. Thus, Applicant's statement that the term in the specification as filed of "metallic wire mesh" meant the "high porosity foam like lattice" now claimed is clearly repugnant to the accepted definition of "wire mesh". It also appears that Applicant may have been concealing the best mode of the invention because Applicant has shown evidence that the nickel foam was utilized prior to the filing of the instant Application, but Applicant did not disclose the nickel foam within the specification as filed.

Conclusion

5. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
